

Old St. Peter's Cemetery
CH-620
Waldorf vic.
Public

1825-1941

The old cemetery of St. Peter's Church, located a short distance to the east of the present church, is significant in its association with the long history of Catholicism in southern Maryland. The cemetery, containing 50-100 gravestones, stands on a site which once included a frame place of worship known as "Reeves Chapel." The chapel was built in 1860 on land donated to the Catholic Church by Thomas Reeves, and was used by the congregation until 1941. The church site and cemetery are part of Upper Zachia Parish established in 1700, and located at and around the headwaters of Zachia Swamp.

Old St. Peter's Cemetery is located on the southeast corner of Gardiner Road and Poplar Hill Road in the northeastern section of the Charles County. Currently, the site consists of approximately three and one half acres of open, level grassy terrain containing 50-100 graves. While the north and west sides of the site are bordered by public roads, the south and east are bordered by forested land. The graves have a somewhat sprawling appearance and are not enclosed by either fence or hedge. Most gravestones consists of marble slabs with a few obelisk monuments scattered throughout.

The Old St. Peter's Cemetery, located a short distance to the east of the present church is significant in its association with the early history of Catholicism in southern Maryland. The cemetery, containing 50-100 gravestones, stands on a site which once included a frame place of worship known as "Reeves Chapel" which was built in 1860 and used by the congregation until 1941 when the new church was completed. The church site and cemetery are part of Upper Zachia Parish established in 1700, and located at and around the headwaters of Zachia Swamp.

Charles and St. Mary's Counties are considered the cradle of Catholicism in the United States. In 1634, the first permanent European settlers in Maryland arrived on the Ark and Dove at St. Clement's Island (St. Mary's County). Consisting primarily of Roman Catholic's seeking religious freedom, they came ashore and conducted Mass which today is commemorated annually at the Blessing of the Fleet. It was in St. Mary's that Governor Lord Calvert, himself a Catholic, established the first refuge of religious freedom in the United States.

Southern Maryland continued to attract Catholics throughout the colonial period despite growing religious intolerance. Upper Zachia was the third parish to be established in Charles County. It's formation in 1700 is noteworthy in that just eight year's earlier, in 1692 Maryland officially barred Catholics from all civil rights and established the Church of England as its official religion. Despite this, many Catholics remained in the area and continued to worship in small, private chapels or in private homes. Religious freedom was not secured until the Maryland Constitution of 1775.

During the 18th and early 19th centuries the congregation of Upper Zachia parish was served by the Jesuit Fathers from St. Thomas Manor (CH-6) and later by Piscataway Parish. As the congregation grew, the need for a larger place of worship became evident. Far-sighted parishioner Thomas Reeves, who had no direct heirs, deeded his property to the Catholic Church. In 1860, "Reeves Chapel" was built at the present site (see historic photo) located on the north side of Poplar Hill Road. The Reeves residence was for some time used as a Rectory. Reeves, who died in 1825, is buried in the old cemetery.

Old St. Peter's Cemetery was finally closed in 1941 and replaced by the current cemetery attached to the new church lot.
